

Behaviour in class

During class I should not speak until I am supposed to, for it is very disrespectful especially with a visitor in. It also creates a chain because other people will talk louder than me so their conversation is easier to hear and it creates mayhem that you would find on a battle field. It is also disrespectful because the teacher and also the visitor cannot talk about more important things than we will be talking about like oh I've got 409 followers on Instagram, which is not important at all.

Also it makes a bad impression on Ms Keane and the class pupils, especially the ones who work very hard who can't be taught because every few seconds they hear some noise coming from one of the corners of the room. For we are here to learn and help us get through life, get a job and get a wife and lots of important things. Being disrespectful is incredibly rude for people who want to succeed in life with a nice house and enjoyable, interesting well-paying job.

However if we talk, not only are we disrespecting our teacher and visitor but also ourself because we all say, oh I don't want to work in McDonalds when were older but if it keeps going like this with nobody learning because of the disruption in the class that might be the case. So there's no point in our mums and dads paying €5000 a year for a bit of crack and banter when we are here for a good reason and that's to learn and get through life.

James Jury